Board Memo 131-2024: Potential Tropical Storm Across the Carolinas

Executive Board,

NAPS headquarters received the below forecast from Orin Wilson, the Office of National Preparedness, regarding a potential tropical storm across the Carolinas starting on September 16th.

At 500 AM EDT (0900 UTC), the disturbance was located about 95 miles ESE of Charleston, SC. The system is moving toward the northwest near 3 mph. A faster motion toward the northwest is expected today and Tuesday, followed by a gradual turn toward the north by Wednesday.

On the forecast track, the low will reach the coast of South Carolina this afternoon and then move inland across the Carolinas tonight through Wednesday.

Data from an Air Force Reserve Hurricane Hunter aircraft indicate that maximum sustained winds have increased to near 50 mph with higher gusts. Little change in strength is expected before the system reaches the coast, and the low still has a chance of becoming a tropical or subtropical storm. Weakening is forecast after the system moves inland, and it is likely to dissipate over the Carolinas by late Wednesday.

- Formation chance through 48 hours...high...70 percent.
- Formation chance through 7 days...high...70 percent.

Tropical-storm-force winds extend outward up to 175 miles from the center. A sustained wind of 35 mph and a gust to 40 mph were recently reported at Cape Lookout, North Carolina.

The minimum central pressure based on aircraft dropsonde data is 1006 mb.

Also, attached is the excessive rainfall outlook map for Potential Tropical Cyclone Eight with corresponding excel spreadsheet of post offices.

Network facilities falling within High, Moderate and Slight risks of flash flooding are labeled. Attached Excel file contains full list of postal facilities and their risk of flash flooding.
