

NAPS Guide to Election Night 2018

Elections have consequences and the outcome of this year's balloting will be pivotal to the livelihood of NAPS members and for the future of the U.S. Postal Service. Backers of postal privatization need to be held accountable and the protectors of postal employee benefits need to be re-elected. Therefore, NAPS has a deep interest in the outcome of the November congressional elections. Early voting has commenced in many states, so if you are not able to vote in person on Election Day, November 6, make sure you're counted now. Your future and the viability of the Postal Service depends on it.

While I would invite election communications from NAPS members, I would like to equip you with the tools to be your own NAPS Election Night Pundit. I recommend the following websites for keeping track of returns: cnn.com, nytimes.com, msnbc.com, c-span.com, foxnews.com, or individual states' Secretary of State or Board of Elections.

Below, I have divided up the nation by poll closing times (Eastern Standard Time), identifying those races that, I believe, are competitive. Senate races are designated with "SEN" and House races are identified by the congressional district number. The incumbent, if any, is identified with an asterisk. I believe that House races in Florida, Illinois, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Virginia will be the bellwethers, as their polls close early and there are multiple toss-up races in those states.

Enjoy your election-night watch parties.
